

How to quit your job and become an Entrepreneur: Is the Grass Greener?

Do you long to quit your job and become an entrepreneur? Not sure what to do, or where to start? Read this first! A couple of times a week, I am contacted by people, who are interested in going into business for themselves. It might be that they just want to be a freelancer or an independent consultant, but often they also want to start and grow a business. I find that a lot of people are fascinated and excited by the idea of not going to work each day, charmed by the idea of working from the comfort of their own home and avoiding sitting through meetings where they feel that nothing actually gets done. Whats not exciting about that? I get a buzz when people come up to me afterwards and tell me that I gave them the confidence to go out and do it! There is definitely a growing trend towards businesses and organizations shrinking, and utilizing freelancers on a more regular basis. I have now lost track of the number of freelancing websites that you can engage a website developer in Estonia to help you with your WordPress site, or a graphic designer in Hong Kong who will design your business cards for you. The advance of technology is obviously driving this, but so is the reality that things just dont have to be as they have always been. I believe that as consumers, we are driving the freelancing trend. We want personalized services, not en mass distribution, and we also want it to be cheap and fast. Large organizations just cant compete with my graphic designer that designed me a logo for $5, for instance. So, if you are deciding whether or not to take the plunge into the world of self-employment, I encourage you to think carefully about my tips below. Everyone is different, and these are mainly my experiences. This book is designed for those that want to quit working for the man, and work for themselves. Whatever you do, dont quit your job until you have read this book!
