

Let Down Meditations for Nursing Mothers: A Breastfeeding Meditation Guide

With a foreword by Bea Rowell, RM, LM, CPM, a licensed midwife of 14 years and owner of Labor of Love Birth Center.

----- Breastfeeding can be a dream experience of bonding with your baby. It can also be a painful, frustrating nightmare that results in both new moms and old hands at breastfeeding throwing in the towel and going for the formula. And sometimes that's just what is necessary. If it seems like your nursing issues aren't the typical ones, or that your milk is drying up, it's possible you're suffering from let down issues. While this book doesn't diagnose what breastfeeding issues you may be having, it does offer a method to aid your body in the let down reflex. Based on the intimate connection between the mind, the body, and your baby's affect on both, it utilizes relaxation techniques you likely learned in prenatal classes and implements them in different ways. At the time of this publication, the author is a mother of five, ages 7 and under. She breastfed all of her children, with greater and lesser success, and discovered these meditations while attempting to find a way to relax in the midst of her busy (and loud) family life.
