

A Recovery Journey (Beginnings Book 1)

In this first of the three books, A Recovery Journey, Marohn vividly describes his first awakening, fox-hole moment of surrender sitting naked in front of a white telephone frantically wondering whether he should call a local rehab. Over time, through long-term counseling and peer-group recovery meetings, the author began to uncover some of the psychological themes underlying so many of his dysfunctional behaviors: to acquire knowledge as power; to seek refuge in religion; to live in a world of fantasy and high drama; to believe that life was to be fatalistically endured. The author's continuous self-examination journey led him to own up to his escapist world of one-night stands and chronic resentments and fears.
