

Growing up, I never took seriously the hurt and pain that a lot of God's people go through today. It never was important to me. My life always consisted of what I wanted and the goals I wanted to achieve. It was when I moved to the city, and I felt like I was stripped of everything materialistic that I thought brought me happiness. I found out that trials, and sometimes even being without a home, caused me to have a new perspective on life. I found out that life is a gift that we tend to take advantage of. During this time in my life, God showed me that true happiness does not come from wealth and materialistic things, but from being in the peace of God. I truly became saturated in God's peace when I started having compassion in the needs of others. As I went through these trials, I saw life from God's perspective. He wanted me to see life through his eyes, and as I began to focus on life from God's eyes, my life started to become more clear. Through God's eyes, he views those who are hurt, and helpless, and need our attention. As you read this book, let it saturate in your heart, and you will begin Seeing the World Through the Eyes of God.
