

It only took one letter to make every painful memory resurface. But it took Kyleigh Helton thirteen years to bury those memories. The question in that letter will force her to make a difficult decision. Forgive, or continue to let resentment and anger consume her fragile core. The simple life she craves seems miles away when she's dealing with an ex who won't let her go and a boyfriend whose problems mimic a past she'd rather forget. She realizes it's time for things to change. But every decision and change she makes has a consequence, and she begins to wonder if she's strong enough to handle them. David Madison has been struggling with guilt and grief since his brother's death and finds comfort in the one thing Kyleigh despises. When a phone call pushes him over the edge and guilt consumes him even more, he breaks a promise to Kyleigh that threatens to tear them apart. As quickly as things fall back into place, his world shatters again, pushing him to the breaking point, and he begins to wonder how much more he can take before he turns to the one addiction that started it all. But he can't. He promised. He needs to stay strong for Kyleigh. Because now she needs him more than ever, and he won't let her down again.
