

The Golden Censer (Classic Reprint)

Church had them ;and the sublimest and most heavenly of them remain in use unto this day. All the Reformers used them in public worship, and the laity used them in their private devotions; and by this mode of devotion their hearts and faith were sustained in the bloodiest martyrperiods of the Church! Knox prepared forms of worship for the Church of Scotland. Twice in the Scottish Kirk did the Presbyterians adopt the use of a Liturgy, Baxter compiled a Liturgy for the Non-conformists. Even Wesley enjoined the use of a Liturgy on his followers. Baxter says: The constant disuse of forms is apt to breed giddiness in religion, and to make men hypocrites, who shall delude themselves with conceits that they delight in God, when it is but in those novelties and varieties of expression that they are delighted ;and therefore I advise forms, to fix Christians, and to make them sound. In regard to the use of forms of prayer, the worshipper, in the nature of the case, can have no choice. He must use his own language, or the language of another. If he depends on his own, it will gradually grow into a form to him; so that he will use the same language; the same phrases will recur, the same devotional ideas will be expressed, and the same Scripture passages will ever be interwoven with his prayers. Such prayers, not being formed on a high devotional model, but the fruit of his own limited Christian ideas and experience, will be filled with common-place ideas, if not of cant phrases, and will thus in time become tasteless to himself, and fail to interest, impress, or move the heart. It is a deception to suppose that a form of devotion, when it is a true one, does not move the heart, and inspire a devotional spirit. It is sometimes said that when these forms have been often used, and become familiar, they fail any longer to interest and stir the heart.
